American Enterprise in Foreign Markets Fred V. Carstensen, 2018-08-25 In 1914 the two largest firms in Russia were subsidiaries of American companies Remarkably they were almost as large as their parent companies striking testimony to the potential of the underdeveloped Russian market Fred Carstensen provides detailed histories of the movement of International Harvester and Singer into this new profitable and somewhat forbidding territory Describing how both sales organizations evolved in Russia Carstensen relates their development to overall company histories worldwide growth changing sales strategies and structures recruitment and training of employees and corporate leadership in America and abroad He finds that both firms entered the Russian market because they needed new outlets to sustain high levels of production and sales Although there are parallels in their experiences Carstensen identifies how the responses of the two corporations differed reflecting the varying strategies and perceptions of company management Together the case studies provide a test for many of the supposed qualities and patterns of Russian economic history Contrary to accounts of the experiences of other companies these firms found the Russian market remarkably rich developing a level of sales that might have surpassed the American market if war had not erupted In contrast to the standard view of foreign enterprise neither company came to Russia because of government invitation or influence but rather because of the intrinsic attractiveness of the markets and neither firm found the government bureaucracy graft ridden or the customers dishonest Carstensen shows that International Harvester and Singer Sewing Machine clearly influenced Russia in a positive way Both trained large numbers of Russians in modern industrial and marketing procedures and both provided an extraordinary volume of credit on comparatively easy terms to encourage purchase of their products Indeed the success of their approach suggests that Russian economic development may have been limited not by weak aggregate demand but by the relative absence of sources of credit Originally published in 1984 A UNC Press Enduring Edition UNC Press Enduring Editions use the latest in digital technology to make available again books from our distinguished backlist that were previously out of print These editions are published unaltered from the original and are presented in affordable paperback formats bringing readers both historical and cultural value Instructor's Manual to Interpersonal Communications Beebe, 1998-12 American Multinational

Markets, Firms and the Management of Labour in Modern Britain Howard F. Gospel, 1992-05-14 Originally published in 1992 this book examines the development of employers human resource management and industrial relations policies in Britain It adopts a broad historical perspective beginning with the inheritance from the nineteenth century and ending with an analysis of human resource management policies It focuses on how managers organise the employment relationship how they control work relations and how they deal with trade unions and industrial relations The author examines these in the context of the market within which the firm operates and the strategy structure and hierarchy of industrial enterprise The book shows that historically British employers tended to adopt market based strategies rather than internal ones
