Stem Cells that Grow Possibilities

The topic of stem cell research is a very heated, controversial debate that has several people discussing the subject around the world. Stem cell research is the process of using embryonic, umbilical, or modified cells from another organism to copy cells that are present in another separate organism. These cells produced are younger, healthier ones that take on the function of the cells they are copying. These copied cells can then be inserted into other organisms to help improve areas where their natural cells are lacking specific functions. An animal that has been paralyzed by a spinal cord injury can be injected with cells that are modified to work in that area. After being injected with these specific cells, the animal is able to walk again because of the new cells that were put into its body. Therefore, stem cell research should be allowed to proceed on with further investigation due to its cure to minor disabilities, the decrease in medicine intake, and the possibilities to treat diseases that were once incurable.

Stem cells are cells in an organism's body that have the ability to express any characteristics of any cell in the body. These cells are not designed to perform a certain function as a muscle cell or brain cell are, they are blank and can be programmed to transform into any cell in the body. Since these cells are capable of such tasks, they can fit in where other cells are lacking. Seeing that stem cells have this special ability to adopt to become anything, they become very helpful. . In "Cell Technique Works Without Embryos", Rob Stein uses spinal cord injuries as an example. Say someone has been in an accident and got a serious spinal cord injury that caused paralysis. By inserting stem cells into the spinal cord where the wound occurred, those cells could help repair the damaged areas. These stem cells attend to the areas that dead spinal cord cells are leaving absent. These cells can be used in more places than spinal cords
