

MUSCLE AND NERVOUS TISSUE

Skeletal muscle is composed of specialized cells involved in contraction. Skeletal muscle fibers are up to 1 meter long and 20–100 micrometers in diameter. They are striated, meaning they have a regular pattern of light and dark bands called sarcomeres. These bands are formed by the arrangement of actin and myosin filaments. The sarcomere is the basic unit of contraction in skeletal muscle. Labels and colors show the structure of the skeletal muscle cells, the sarcomere, and individual cells.

Cardiac muscle is also striated but the sarcomeres are more irregularly arranged. These sarcomeres are found in the heart muscle. Cardiac muscle cells are branched and have a central nucleus. They are surrounded by a network of gap junctions called desmosomes. These desmosomes connect the cells and allow them to contract as a unit. Labels and colors show the structure of the cardiac muscle cells, the sarcomere, and individual cells.

Smooth muscle is not striated and is found in the walls of hollow organs. The cells are spindle-shaped and have a central nucleus. They are arranged in bundles. Labels and colors show the structure of the smooth muscle cells, the nucleus, and individual cells.

Epithelial tissue is composed of cells that line the surfaces of organs and cavities. It is composed of a single layer of cells. The cells are closely packed and have a polarized appearance. Labels and colors show the structure of the epithelial cells, the nucleus, and individual cells.
