The site of Anyang the last capital of the Shang dynasty dated to around 1200 to 1000 BCE is one of the most important sources of knowledge about craft production in Bronze Age China Excavations and research of the settlement over the past ninety years demonstrate both the advanced level of Shang craft workers and the scale and capacity of the craft industries of the time

However materials unearthed in Anyang by different expeditions have since been stored separately in China and Taiwan making a thorough study of this important aspect of life in Shang China challenging Despite efforts to integrate the data based on published material the physical evidence rarely has been considered as a single group Through a systematic analysis of the archaeological materials available in both China and Taiwan Yung ti Li provides a detailed picture of craft production in Anyang and paves the way for a new understanding of how the Shang capital functioned as a metropolis Focusing on craft producing activities including bronze casting bone working shell and marble inlay working lithic working and pottery production Kingly Crafts examines the material remains the technology and the production organization of the craft industries Although the level of Shang craftsmanship can be seen in the finished products Li demonstrates that it is necessary to study workshop remains and their archaeological context to reconstruct the social and political contexts of craft production Offering a comprehensive investigation of these remains Kingly Crafts sheds new light on the relationships between craft industries and political authority in the late Shang period      Pattern-making Ben Shaw,James Edgar,1921

Developmental Biology and Musculoskeletal Tissue Engineering Martin J. Stoddart, April M. Craft, Girish Pattappa, Oliver F.W. Gardner, 2018-04-24 Developmental Biology and Musculoskeletal Tissue Engineering Principles and Applications focuses on the regeneration of orthopedic tissue drawing upon expertise from developmental biologists specializing in orthopedic tissues and tissue engineers who have used and applied developmental biology approaches Musculoskeletal tissues have an inherently poor repair capacity and thus biologically based treatments that can recapitulate the native tissue properties are desirable Cell and tissue based therapies are gaining ground but basic principles still need to be addressed to ensure successful development of clinical treatments Written as a source of information for practitioners and those with a nascent interest it provides background information and state of the art solutions and technologies Recent developments in orthopedic tissue engineering have sought to recapitulate developmental processes for tissue repair and regeneration and such developmental biology based approaches are also likely to be extremely amenable for use with more primitive stem cells Brings the fields of tissue engineering and developmental biology together to explore the potential for regenerative medicine based research to contribute to enhanced clinical outcomes Initial chapters provide an outline of the development of the musculoskeletal system in general and later chapters focus on specific tissues Addresses the effect of mechanical forces on the musculoskeletal system during development and the relevance of these processes to tissue engineering Discusses the role of genes in the development of musculoskeletal tissues and their potential use in tissue engineering Describes how developmental biology is being used to influence and guide tissue engineering approaches for cartilage bone disc and tendon repair
