Committee on Assessment of NASA's Earth Science Program found that the survey vision is being realized at a far slower pace than was recommended principally because the required budget was not achieved. Exacerbating the budget shortfalls, NASA Earth science programs experienced launch failures and delays and the cost of implementing missions increased substantially as a result of changes in mission scope, increases in launch vehicle costs, and/or the lack of availability of a medium class launch vehicle. Underestimation of costs by the decadal survey and unfunded programmatic changes that were required by Congress and the Office of Management and Budget. In addition, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) has made significant reductions in scope to its future Earth environmental observing satellites as it contends with budget shortfalls.

Earth Science and Applications from Space: A Midterm Assessment of NASA's Implementation of the Decadal Survey recommends a number of steps to better manage existing programs and to implement future programs that will be recommended by the next decadal survey. The report also highlights the urgent need for the Executive Branch to develop and implement an overarching multiagency national strategy for Earth observations from space, a key recommendation of the 2007 decadal survey that remains unfulfilled. National Imperatives for Earth and Climate Science Research and Applications: Investments Over the Next Decade. NASA 50th Anniversary Proceedings: NASA's First 50 Years: Historical Perspectives. Steven J. Dick, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 2010-07-07. On 29 July 1958, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed the National Aeronautics and Space Act, creating the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), which became operational on 1 October of that year. Over the next 50 years, NASA achieved a set of spectacular feats ranging from advancing the well-established field of aeronautics to pioneering the new fields of Earth and space science and human spaceflight. In the midst of the geopolitical context of the Cold War, 12 Americans walked on the Moon, arriving in peace for all mankind. Humans saw their home planet from a new perspective with unforgettable Apollo images of Earthrise and the Blue Marble, as well as the pale blue dot from the edge of the solar system. A flotilla of spacecraft has studied Earth, while other spacecraft have probed the depths of the solar system and the universe beyond. In the 1980s, the evolution of aeronautics gave us the first winged human spacecraft, the Space Shuttle, and the International Space Station stands as a symbol of human cooperation in space, as well as a possible way station to the stars. With the Apollo fire and two Space Shuttle accidents, NASA has also seen the depths of tragedy. In this volume, a wide array of scholars turn a critical eye toward NASA's first 50 years probing an institution widely seen as the premier agency for exploration in the world carrying on a long tradition of exploration by the United States and the human species in general Fifty years after its founding NASA finds itself at a crossroads that historical perspectives can only help to illuminate
