1. A ping fails when you have used traceroute to determine a network's route. What network configuration item prevents the router from seeing the neighbors connected to the second hop from the first administrator? How do you determine if the ping failed because the first hop failed?

- The network administrator has configured a strict firewall that ping cannot use that port.
- The network administrator has misconfigured the hop count.
- The network administrator has failed to verify the IP address configured on router R2.
- The network administrator has failed to set period of connectivity from the destination back to the starting connected network.

Explanation:

The show ip neighbors command can be used to prove that Layer 1 and Layer 2 connectivity exists between two Cisco devices. For example, if two routers have duplicate IP addresses, a ping between the devices will fail, but the status of other link neighbors will be successful. The show ip neighbors command should be used to verify that IP addresses of the devices connected change to meet the same IP addresses assigned to the two routers.

2. Which statement is true about EGP and a Class server?

- The show ip neighbors command is used with EGP and is configured as a neighborship of the Class server.
- To disable EGP globally, the no ip class server command is used on the router.
- EGP can be disabled globally on a router's interface.
- Because it runs on the Class server, the EGP process is always implemented in software.

Explanation:

EGP is a Class server protocol that runs on the router globally. The show ip class server command displays the status of the EGP process. The show ip class server command is used to verify the status of the EGP process.
