

RUGBY LEAGUE GAME

By James Kirkup

Born 1918 – 2009 (51) – Conscientious objector in WWII.
Left England in the 1960s when one of his poems was banned. 'Very prolific' – spent time in Japan where he mastered the art of Haiku. Lived in Spain.

Tone of witty whimsy. Light, wit, conversational style. Beside the wisdom and fine irony is a ruthless commentary on the human condition.

Title creates expectation of glorious competition. To be part of a league suggests competitive status. But ironically the content of the poem contradicts this.

Sport is absurd, and sad.
Those grown men ~~just~~ look
In those dreary long blue shorts.
Those ringed stockings, Edwardian, Balding pates, and huge Fat knees that ought to be heroes'

Crown of a man's head – losing hair – manhood.

Official rugby terms used

Grappling, hooking, gallantly ~~rolling~~ –
Is all this courage really necessary?
Taking their good clean fun
So solemnly, they run each other down
With earnest keenness, for the honour of Victory, the cap, the country side

Epithet – words in descending order of importance results in ridicule – the country side contradicts the expectation of a grand ideal / ambition.

Overgrown / incongruous

Like great boys roll each other,
In the mud of public Saturdays,
Groping their blind way back
To noble youth, away from the bank.
The wife, the gram, the spin drier
Back to the Spartan freedom of the field.

Contradiction – silly / tragic Players are no longer young – suggests they are doing something childish / no longer appropriate.

Appeal to reader – involves them.

They are killed out in a uniform which makes them look foolish.

Edward (King of England from 1901 – 1910) seems old fashioned – from a bygone era.

Disgust – sneering – opposite of his idea of the heroic.

Old fashioned term for valiant / noble in battle – satirical tone / irony. These men are past it.

Rhetorical question challenges their actions.

Cliche poems ironic – makes fun of them. They are the cliché.

Poet seems to laugh at the violence but recognises the sincerity of their objective.

Embarrassment of their dirty bodies in public

Contrast description of youth and middle age – adults seem unable to recapture their past.

Youth – qualities of courage / honour – memories of a more romantic era

Financial responsibilities – grind of a gulf job

Emotional ties, the weight of a child's dependence, mundane domesticity

Double meaning / ambiguity – austere life-style / self-discipline OR courage in the face of danger.

A Scientific Analysis of Running Lines in Rugby

Ashley Evert, 2013 The game of rugby has been played for over a century and yet its intricacies are still not fully understood The key ingredient coaches are seeking is what can be added to a team's make up that will result in an increase in that team's level of playing success The objective of this study is the exploration of the biomechanical aspects of movement in a rugby context specifically looking at the stages before during and after contact The hypothesis is that the optimal use of running lines in rugby union will lead to more successful breaches in the opposition's defensive lines thus an increase in linebreaks will occur In order to make a comparison based on scientific research principles nine matches played during the 2001 season was compared with nine matches played during the 2002 season For each match played in the 2001 and 2002 seasons the total number of linebreaks achieved in a match was calculated In addition the total number of linebreaks achieved in the 2002 season was further subdivided into the specific categories of intervention in order to determine which intervention had the biggest impact on the total number of linebreaks achieved By means of video footage of the matches played notational analysis was performed and information was gathered in order to gain data for further evaluation The actions regarding the execution of the linebreaks were evaluated manually in respect of the intervention that was imposed during the coaching of the team during the 2002 season Without exception a comparison between similar teams played during both seasons indicated that the total number of linebreaks achieved during the 2002 season was much higher than when the team competed against similar opposition during the 2001 season The aggregate numbers indicated a significant increase in linebreaks from the 2001 to 2002 season This conclusion was achieved by means of a simple T test Firstly an applied F test was done to determine whether the two samples had equal variances or not Under the null hypothesis we assume that the variances of the two samples are equal while the alternative states that the two samples have different variances A value for the test statistic that is greater than the critical value will lead to a rejection of the null hypothesis The test statistic was calculated and evaluated against the  $F_{8,8,2,59}$  critical value on a 5% level of significance The value of 15.921 is greater than the critical value of 2.95 and therefore the null hypothesis cannot be accepted concluding that the two samples do not have equal variances We then proceeded to test whether the 2002 average linebreaks are significantly higher than the average linebreaks achieved in the 2001 season Under the null hypothesis the two sample averages are equal Under the alternative the 2002 average is higher than the 2001 average In contrast to normal T tests this specific test was a one sided upper or right hand test due to the fact that we are testing whether the one average is greater and not equal to the other Therefore we would only reject the null hypothesis of equal sample averages if the test statistic were greater than the appropriate critical value The calculated test statistic is 4.4827 and was evaluated against the  $t_{0.05,9,1,833}$  critical value Once again we cannot accept the null hypothesis Therefore we can conclude that the average of the total linebreaks made during the 2002 season is statistically greater than the average of the total linebreaks made during the 2001 season The results of this study therefore indicate that the new techniques incorporated into the coaching of the team in 2002 did positively influence the number of linebreaks when compared to the 2001 season
