1. The death of _____, who founded himself on the receiving end of twenty-three stab wounds on the floor of the Roman Senate in 44 B.C., touched off a 600-year succession of Roman dictators that was a historical rollercoaster ride of extraordinary proportions.
2. For centuries, the Rhine River was a buffer protecting _____ from Roman expansion. No previous army could cross it with the might that was needed for conquest, but Julius Caesar was unlike any previous warrior. Before Caesar's soldiers could conquer Germania, his engineers first had to conquer the Rhine. So his legions set out to build the first Roman military _____ across the river, and force Mother Nature to bend to Caesar's will.
3. No single emperor can claim credit for the success of the aqueducts – they were built over the course of several centuries. However, it was the disfigured, stuttering Emperor _____ who arguably had the greatest impact on Rome's _____ supply. During his reign, he built two major aqueducts – the Aqua Claudia and the Anio Novus – which dramatically increased the amount of water flowing into Rome.
4. _____, the mother of Emperor Nero and wife of Emperor Claudius, came from a line of ambitious women. She was able to convince Claudius to adopt Nero and make him Emperor over his natural son. Ultimately, she was murdered on the orders of her son Nero, whose belief of her haunting drove Nero further into insanity.
5. Emperor _____ blamed the _____ on a new religious cult called the _____, and had hundreds of them strung up and burned to death in the streets of Rome. He then confiscated a third of the charred city as his own personal property. He used slave labor and public money to build the empire's most extravagant monument to self-indulgence – a pleasure palace covering some 200 acres of downtown Rome. This pleasure palace became known as the _____.
6. Emperor _____ put Rome's greatest architectural minds to work for the people. He started to build Rome's most famous engineering marvel by draining the massive Transition Point: From Steam to the Singularity Sean A. Culey, 2018-11-06 We live in disruptive times The world is changing faster than ever before leaving people dazed businesses struggling economies floundering and societies fracturing But why Transition Point is the result of over five years of research to establish the answer a breathtaking tale of freedom unintended consequences and disruptive technologies that starts 1000 years ago and ends up in the second half of the 21st Century Starting with an examination into the drivers of technological change and the social economic and political factors that both enable or suppress it Transition Point explains why industrialisation happened where and when it did why progress comes in waves and why the technologies in the current wave such as robotics blockchain and AI are likely to be the most disruptive of all It then addresses the million dollar question what's next What impact will this wave have on our businesses our economies and most importantly on our society Culey explores how our current trajectory could result in a new golden age but also how it is just as likely to result in a digital dictatorship of compliance and constant surveillance Finally he explains why we may soon see Homo sapiens role as the dominant species come to an end As Klaus Schwab founder of the World Economic Forum stated We stand on the brink of a technological revolution that will fundamentally alter the way we live work and relate to one another In its scale scope and complexity the transformation will be unlike anything humankind has experienced before Transition Point explains why this is happening what it means and why the decisions we make now will prove to be critical The Building News and Engineering
