Abstract—This study conducted a systematic literature search to assess the effectiveness of group decision-making methods that include decision support systems (DSSs) in the agricultural sector. Based on the PRISMA search strategy, 100 articles were identified and analyzed. The results show that group decision-making methods, such as the Analytic Hierarchy Process (AHP), the Fuzzy Analytic Hierarchy Process (FAHP), and the Fuzzy Analytic Network Process (FANP), are the most commonly used methods in the agricultural sector. The results also show that the effectiveness of group decision-making methods is influenced by several factors, including the complexity of the problem, the number of decision-makers, and the availability of information. The study concludes that group decision-making methods, when used in conjunction with DSSs, can be an effective way to make decisions in the agricultural sector.
