wonderful book that deserves to be widely read and more importantly widely acted on. It presents a robust and detailed critique of current orthodoxies in how we have tried to improve educational practice through the use of evidence. Researchers, practitioners, policymakers and funders with an interest in evidence and school improvement should take note.

Professor Robert Coe, Director of Research and Development at Evidence Based Education UK and Senior Associate at the Education Endowment Foundation UK, A Critical Guide to Evidence Informed Education analyses the role of research in education and its potential for improving education policy and practice. The book considers how divisions both between different research traditions and between theory and practice are hindering progress. Additional online content gives readers access to extra resources such as reflective questions and technical annexes to deepen understanding. Drawing on their experiences both as teachers and researchers, the authors expertly review fundamental questions about what research is, what it is for, and the challenges of generating, communicating and using evidence. The book skilfully synthesises perspectives on evidence informed education, forming connections across the divided field and championing a more collaborative and eclectic approach. For education students, teachers and school leaders, this book is an accessible and invaluable guide to the methods, problems and key findings from several interconnected areas of education research. For researchers, this book offers an extended critical commentary and methodological critique of several related research communities and their current and potential contribution to educational improvement. The authors invite and equip readers to take their own stance on current and perennial debates about the role of research and evidence in improving education.

Thomas Perry is an Associate Professor at the University of Warwick. He is a former schoolteacher who now teaches about education research methods and advises and supervises researchers at all levels, including leading the Education Doctorate (EdD) programme at Warwick. His research and teaching are focused on research methodology and the role of research and evidence in improving education policy and practice.

Rebecca Morris is an Associate Professor at the University of Warwick. She is a former secondary English teacher and has previously worked at Durham University and University of Birmingham. Rebecca's research interests include education policy, teacher education and the teacher workforce, English and literacy, and widening participation. She is an editorial board member for the British Educational Research Journal and Educational Review.

After the Shock City Tom Hulme,2019 A comparative and trans national study of urban culture in Britain and the United States from the late nineteenth to the twentieth century Using the industrial cities of Manchester and Chicago as case studies this book traces the idea of citizenship across different areas of local life in the first half of the twentieth century from philosophy and festivals to historical re enactment and public housing Coalitions of voluntary associations municipal government and local elites lambasted modern urban culture as the cause of social disintegration But rather than simply decanting the population to new and smaller settlements they tried to re imagine a reformed city as a place that could foster loyal and healthy communities Celebrating civic progress in the period since the shock city of the nineteenth century they sought to create a sense of local pride that could bracket growing class and racial tensions The diverse individuals groups and communities of the city reacted in different ways to this message Some were happy to gather under the identity of one civic banner Others held back by discriminatory structures of society chose to shape their own idea of citizenship one that looked far beyond the city for a sense of belonging and rights Historians have tended to emphasise the rise of national identity state centralisation and popular patriotism at the expense of distinctive local identities municipal autonomy and expressions of civic pride This book aims to redress the imbalance demonstrating how local ideas of belonging could still exert a powerful hold on the making of modern citizenship TOM HULME is a lecturer in the School of History Anthropology Philosophy and Politics Queen s University Belfast
