Case Study

Maggie is a 24 year-old woman who sustained a spinal cord injury (SCI) during a motor vehicle accident while on her honeymoon. Her husband was thrown from the vehicle but received only minor injuries. Maggie was transported by EMS to the local emergency department. She was diagnosed with a C₅₋₆ vertebral subluxation and a C₆ crush injury, resulting in a complete C₆ spinal cord injury. She also sustained a left clavicular fracture. She received nasal O₂ for respiratory support. Once stabilized, she was transferred to the specialized trauma center near her home. A halo vest was applied which stabilized her cervical spine. No operative procedures were indicated at that time. After 22 days, her endurance improved so that she could tolerate sitting upright in a chair for up to 1 hour. She was transferred to the nearby rehabilitation facility's SCI unit. During her 12 week stay, she will only wear the halo brace for the first 3 to 4 weeks and her left shoulder flexion and abduction will also be limited (<90°) for the first several weeks until the clavicle fracture heals. Her only complications were two episodes of autonomic dysreflexia (apparently secondary to hard stool in the lower rectum) and a mild UTI.

Before her injury, Maggie was a college student in a liberal arts curriculum. She and her new husband had recently signed a 1-year lease on a second-floor apartment close to the university. She had been totally independent in all of her ADL and home-management activities. Her leisure pursuits included recreational team sports (particularly softball) and more sedentary activities like reading and gourmet cooking. She was also involved with her family, particularly two sisters and her parents, all of whom live close by.

You are assigned to be her primary OT and her expected stay in the rehabilitation setting is 12 weeks. Currently Maggie is dependent for transfers, contact guard for sitting balance in the wheelchair and dependent for all BADLS of feeding, dressing, bathing and toileting.

Neuropsychology Case Studies Jennifer Niskala Apps,Robert F. Newby,Laura Weiss Roberts,2008-12-23 In the recent literature the most influential case study books in neuropsychology are in the adult realm Pediatric neuropsychology is a rapidly developing field with increasingly greater influence in the assessment diagnosis early identification and treatment of childhood illnesses This book will provide the first centralized comprehensive resource for case studies in pediatric neuropsychology Not only will this supply a valuable compilation for the growing numbers of professionals in this field but will also serve as an innovative and appealing resource for therapists teachers and others interested in child development This book will be structured in such a way that readers can easily access individual cases of interest as well as related areas of dysfunction Section breakdowns will be provided in order to highlight the combined focus of case presentations in acquired neuropsychological dysfunction as well as developmental disorders Each section will begin with an introductory chapter highlighting the salient feature of the concept and providing brief up to date reviews of the current research and theories Within each global section individual case studies will serve as stand alone chapters Contributing authors will be provided extensive guidance and coaching with regards to the standard format and information to be included in each chapter The first section of this book will present cases involving neurological disorders The intention of this section is to provide not only classic examples of neurological dysfunction in children but also to provide interesting cases of unique or remarkable presentations The second section will present an accumulation of cases representing both common and progressive conceptualizations of developmental disabilities Section three has been designed to highlight cases which often present complex issues to neuropsychologists The case examples in this section will highlight the use of alternative treatments pathologies that are often a source of inquiry and situations that lack the more rigorous scientific data often utilized in other diagnostic procedures. Additionally, this section may include chapters on common differential diagnosis dilemmas in clinical practice. Often multifaceted and even contradictory evidence can arise during evaluations resulting in complex or problematic situations for the clinician. Such examples are difficult by their nature to forecast but rather would be added during the book's development as they occur.

Evidence-Based Practices and Treatments for Children with Autism Brian Reichow, Peter Doehring, Domenic V. Cicchetti, Fred R. Volkmar, 2010-11-25. Autism spectrum disorders (ASDs) have been increasingly diagnosed in recent years and carries with it far-reaching social and financial implications. With this in mind, educators, physicians, and parents are searching for the best practices and most effective treatments. But because the symptoms of ASDs span multiple domains (e.g., communication and language, social, behavioral), successfully meeting the needs of a child with autism can be quite challenging. Evidence-Based Practices and Treatments for Children with Autism offers an insightful and balanced perspective on topics ranging from the historical underpinnings of autism treatment to the use of psychopharmacology and the implementation of evidence-based practices (EBPs). An evaluation methodology is also offered to reduce the risks and inconsistencies associated with the varying definitions of key autism terminology. This commitment to clearly addressing the complex issues associated with ASDs continues throughout the volume and provides opportunities for further research. Additional issues addressed include Behavioral excesses and deficits treatment, Communication treatment, Social awareness and social skills treatment, Dietary, complementary and alternative treatments, Implementation of EBPs in school settings, Interventions for sensory dysfunction. With its holistic and accessible approach, Evidence-Based Practices and Treatments for Children with Autism is a vital resource for school psychologists and special education professionals as well as allied mental health professionals including clinical child and developmental psychologists, psychiatrist, pediatricians, primary care, and community providers.
