DR-TA- Directed Reading Thinking Activity- promotes applying metacognitive skills to increase comprehension. Good readers continually make, revise, or confirm predictions as they read. In this way, they are forming connections between prior knowledge and new information in the text. In making predictions, proficient readers are aware of their own thought processes.

KWL- Know, Want to Know, Learned- This note-taking device guides students through a three-step process to activate background knowledge, develop a purpose for learning, and summarize.

QAR- Question Answer Relationships- is a strategy to be used after students have read. QAR teaches students how to decipher what types of questions they are being asked and where to find the answers to them. Four types of questions are examined in the QAR.

- Right There- refers to an answer that is in the text
- Think and Search- refers to the answer that is in the text but may be broken and the reader needs to look in different sections to locate it
- Author and You- the answer may not be in the text but the reader needs to use the information the author has given combined with what the reader already knows, to answer the question
- On My Own- means the answer is not in the text, and the reader does not need to read the text to correctly answer the question.

SQ3R- is a reading comprehension method named for its five steps: survey, question, read, recite, and review.

Close test- an assessment consisting of a portion of language with certain items, words, or sign removed, where the participant is asked to replace the missing language

- A teacher shows students a book cover that includes the title but does not allow them to preview the illustrations in the book. This strategy supports expanding the depth and quality of students' predictions in an effort to not limit predictions.
- When a SPED teacher and reading specialist are planning for a new unit together, the best first step is to establish goals and objectives for the unit.
- The single best predictor of academic success for second-language learners is VOCABULARY KNOWLEDGE. This is the most important component of oral language proficiency relating to academic achievement.
- The best time for a student to edit a piece of personal writing is several days after writing a revised draft.
- An 8th grade social studies teacher administers a cloze procedure to the students before they read a chapter on the Amazon rainforest. This measure is most likely used to assess students ability to apply syntax and semantics to activate prior knowledge. A cloze procedure can be used as a diagnostic reading assessment to measure students vocabulary and prior knowledge on a topic. Based on the information gathered from the
