The mechanism of respiration involves the contraction and relaxation of the diaphragm and the external intercostal muscles. This is dependent on the contraction and relaxation of the muscles of respiration and the elastic connective tissue.

Mechanism of Respiration

- Inhalation - The contraction of the diaphragm and the external intercostal muscles causes the volume of the thoracic cavity to increase. This causes the pressure inside the thoracic cavity to decrease. As the pressure inside the thoracic cavity decreases, the pressure outside the thoracic cavity (atmospheric pressure) is higher. This causes air to be drawn into the lungs.
- Exhalation - The relaxation of the diaphragm and the external intercostal muscles causes the volume of the thoracic cavity to decrease. This causes the pressure inside the thoracic cavity to increase. As the pressure inside the thoracic cavity increases, the pressure outside the thoracic cavity (atmospheric pressure) is lower. This causes air to be forced out of the lungs.

Factors affecting respiration

- Temperature: The rate of respiration increases with temperature. This is because the enzymes involved in respiration are more active at higher temperatures.
- Concentration of oxygen: The rate of respiration increases with the concentration of oxygen. This is because oxygen is a reactant in the respiration process.
- Concentration of carbon dioxide: The rate of respiration decreases with the concentration of carbon dioxide. This is because carbon dioxide is a product of the respiration process.
- pH: The rate of respiration decreases with a decrease in pH. This is because the enzymes involved in respiration are less active in acidic conditions.
- Water potential: The rate of respiration decreases with a decrease in water potential. This is because the enzymes involved in respiration are less active in dry conditions.

Lung volumes

- Tidal volume: The volume of air that enters or leaves the lungs during normal breathing.
- Inspiratory reserve volume: The volume of air that can be inhaled after a normal inspiration.
- Expiratory reserve volume: The volume of air that can be exhaled after a normal expiration.
- Residual volume: The volume of air that remains in the lungs after a normal expiration.
- Vital capacity: The maximum volume of air that can be inhaled and then exhaled.
